will now require reactive and preventive maintenance of hearing induction loop systems, using a specialist provider. If there's not possible, a minimum of 50% is reached and the loop is clearly signed where the loop is operational. There should always be matching signs wherever an induction system is installed. AV installers and integrators recognize and increase the value of expert expertise; however, these competences need to be updated and fully understand these new changes. The new BS 8300 standard is important as it cannot be ignored in any project that might be involved. Why is the new BS 8300 standard important? BS 8300 is in operation to ensure that everyone has access to enter, use and exit a built environment open to the public in a uniform manner. It is essential providing clear instructions, information and instructions for the use of a building. It is essential staff know that a ring exists and that they know its functionality basic; This way they can advise customers and visitors accordingly. The importance of staff training on assistive listening systems: Staff members are the point of connection between the hearing cycle and the user. Reception desk Personal Voice Counter loop A Customer Service tills Staff Voice Counter loop A Point of Retail Personal Entry Minimum Counter Loop of every other counter provides a counter loop. The original British standard offered limited detail and did not provide examples of what makes best practices. Call the AV CIE experts now on T. Given the advances in innovation and planning, individuals should never again be 'highlighted' by their disability and should be integrated into the environment in a fully inclusive way. CIE A one of the most popular professional AV distributors' and leader in the UK and A leading supplier of induction circuits and assistive listening technology systems. The use of microphones within the system loop A covered also A A this where the expertise of an AVAs professional will make the difference in ensuring the selection of the most appropriate products. The guidelines apply to the interior of the building itself and to the immediate environment. Payment window Voice staff Cycle counter and voice transfer system All payment windows. This is not only frustrating for cycle users, it also means that people are likely to take their business elsewhere. The key element of the revision of BS 8300 is to offer "equal access to services and buildings." This is particularly aimed at the disabled, the elderly or those less able to stand. If a person with hearing/loss problems cannot access information or entertainment because the system has not been properly specified or installed, the revised rules have not been complied with. With these figures in mind, Committee B/559 (the official body that creates and reviews UK standards), realised that the original code of practice BS 8300 had become obsolete and needed revision. Why is clear signage essential for the induction cycle and assistive listening systems? This is due to lack of training of staff or lack of testing using a suitable test counter. Classrooms Magna Tutorials Voice / AV system Wide circuit could be used in combination with a Soundfield system. A lot of hearing aid users have discovered that the induction loop systems are in place, but they are turned off or the staff are a-aware that the loop system is not working. Check-in counters Staff item Counter loop All check-in counters. The previous UK standard was largely based on the Equality Act 2010 and Part M of the Building Regulations which provided for "reasonable accommodation" to enable people with disabilities to use their own and "a e a e For auxiliary auxiliary" a e a e a e including hearing, RF and infrared assistive listening systems. SUPERMARKET PERSONAL CHECKOUT Voice Counter Loop Ideally each checkout provides a loop. For example: access access At and around all buildings entrances accessories for door steps / stairs and ramps lifting corridors and passageways guard hallways and passers-by surface finishes lighting Signage Parking areas Parking areas Storage services Provision of seating you need to consider every aspect of a building / its surroundings and how it has an impact on user accessibility. What is the impact of the new BS 8300 standards on AV installers and customers? This newer version, however, focuses on the integral inclusive environment as a whole and on how it can be made universally accessible, meaning developers can build/make environments included from startup. Regular testing is another essential to be sure of compliance. It also meant that the end clients were not properly. Having this uncertainty meant that it was difficult for AV installers to justify their knowledge of an electrician who could adapt to an induction system.
