Holden's story begins on the Saturday after the end of classes at Pencey Prep School in Agerstown, Pennsylvania. Due to circumstances that tend to rule out a second-hand description as an adult, he leaves school in Pennsylvania and goes underground in New York City for three days. The story was told by Holden Caulfield, a 17-year-old who was just fired from his fourth school. They met on a summer vacation in Maine, played golf and checkers, and held hands at the movie theater. She wakes up at ten on Sunday and calls Sally Hayes, an attractive girl she has dated in the past. [Little, Brown] The Catcher in the Segale A set around the years 50 and A narrated by a young man named Holden Caulfield. They organize a meeting for a screening of a Broadway show. After smoking a pair of cigarettes, he calls Faith Cavendish, a woman he never met but whose number was given to him by a Princeton acquaintance. She tries to phone Jane Gallagher, but her mother answers and hangs up. Maurice, elevator operator of Edmont elevator proposes to send a prostitute to Holden's room for five dollars, and Holden agrees. Drunk enough, Holden calls Sally Hayes and blasts their plans for Christmas Eve. He calls Carl Luce, a young man who had been a student counselor to Holden at Whooton School and who is now a student at Columbia University. It takes him a long time to find it, and the moment he does, it freezes. Phoebe tells him that he misunderstood the poem from which he drew 'image Robert Burns' poem says: 'If a body meets a body, passing through the rye, it does not 'take a body'. Holden calls his former English teacher, Mr. Antolini, who tells him that he can come to his home. From his room to Edmont, Holden can't see some guests' rooms on opposite. Holden had moved to sitting next to her and kissed her on the whole face of her, but she wouldn't allow him to kiss her in her mouth. Holden calls Jane again, but there's no answer. While Holden turns off to the lobby, he begins to think about Jane Gallagher and, in a flashback, he tells how he knew her. Holden thinks she remembers her feeling that she was a stripper, and she believes she can persuade her having sex with him. There was no one like him Martin Amis was the poet of youthful alienation before the youth really knew what last Sunday times ... During the course of the evening, Holden grew more and more nervously for stradlater. And when he returns Stradlater, Holden asks them insistently if he tried to have sex with her. At the suggestion of Sally, they go to Radio City to Ice Skate. By transcending your vulgar, but remaining wonderfully faithful to it, emits a perfectly articulated cry of mixed pain and pleasure. He takes a taxi to Central Park to look for the younger sister, Phoebe, but it's not there. The events he tells happen in the few days between the end of the autumn school term and Christmas, when Holden is sixteen. Knowing he will follow him, he walks towards the zoo, and then the door through the park in a carousel. Holden is not specific to him while he tells the story, but he clarifies that he is being treated in a mental hospital or in a sanatorium. When he tries to explain why he hates the school, he accuses him not to like nothing. Back in the dormitory, Holden is further irritated by his nearby antigenic, Ackley, and his roommate, Stradlater. In Pencey, he failed four out of five of his classes and received a notice that he is expelled, but he is not planned to go home to Manhattan until Wednesday. Once again, he asks the taxi driver where ducks in the central park go in winter, and this cabie is even more irritable than the first. When he arrives at Penn station, he enters a telephone booth and believes that they call different people, but for various reasons why he decides against it. She sits on her knees and talks dirty to him, but she insists in paying the five dollars of her and show her door. Flee the scammers to Pencey Prep, the pinballs around New York City looking for comfort in fleeting meetings - shooting the bull with strangers in diving hotels, wandering the Round Central Park alone, to be beaten by PMPs and shot down by friends. Then he decides to sneak into him and wake up his sister, Phoebe. He visits him an elderly history teacher, Spencer, to say goodbye, but when Spencer tries to reproach him for his poor academic performance, Holden becomes annoyed. On the train in New York, Holden meets the mother of one of his pencey's similar students. He helps one of Phoebe's schoolmates by clutching her skate, and the girl tells him that Phoebe could be in the Museum of Natural History. Samuel Beckett wrote a perfect novel and changed the US culture forever independent the work of him meant a lot for me when I was a young man and writing he still sings. He gives the nuns ten dollars. He pulls out her suit, but Holden starts feeling Ä é Ä PeculiarÄ é ä™ and try to talk to her. However, like most lovers and clowns and higher orders poets, he maintains most of the pain for, and for, himself. Holden cannot hide the drowsiness of him, and Mr. Antolini puts him on the sofa. Both snok badly and decide to take a table instead. Holden sits alone in a in Ernie and observes other customers with disgust. She refuses to listen to her apologies and the leaves of him. Salinger style creates a conversation effect, it's as if Holden is talking to you personally, as if you have seen through the pretensions of the American dream and are growing unable to see the point of living, or contribute to, the society around to you. Written with the clarity of a boy who leaves childhood, he deals with society, love, loss and expectations without ever falling into the clutch of a cliché. He also sees a man and a woman in another room to despise the shifts spitting the morsels of their drinks in the faces of the other and laughing hysterically. Holden says he must meet someone, leaves and returns to Emont. Holden ends his narrative here, saying to the reader who has no intention of telling the story of how he went home and had Ä é ä™ Ä "Sick ..." He intends to go to a new school in Autumn and cautiously optimistic about his future. Pencey is the fourth school of Holden; he has already failed on three others. Holden passes through it as a ghost, always thinking about his sister of Kid Phoebe, the only person who He really understands, and his determination to escape the Fish and find a life of true meaning. The Catcher in the rye is a classic of all time in the literature of arrival: an elegance of elegance to the adolescent, capturing the deeply human need for the connection and disconcerting sense of loss while we leave childhood behind. However, Holden's dances with them and feels that Ä é ä™ Ä "Half in love" with the blonde after seeing how well she dances. Although he knows that the Phoebe class would not be at the Sunday museum, he goes there anyway, but when he arrives there he decides not to enter and instead take a taxi to the Hotel Biltmore to meet Sally. During everything, Holden said enoizussa enoizussa ilc al edisery li :essets es "einon" el e , Ateicos alled "isla" on the wealth of the parents, his roommate who scores with girls using sickly-sweet affection.Lazy in style, full of slang and swear words, it's a novel whose interest and appeal comes from his observations rather than its plot intrigues (in conventional terms, there is hardly any plot at all).
